Lessons From Our Mothers and Our Children

With Mother’s Day coming up May 8, some Senior Day participants from around the county share what they’ve learned from their mothers and from their children.

Jean Shields of Fort Braden says her parents taught her “what to do and what not to do, and how to be a better person.” They taught her scripture when she was growing up and from that foundation, she and her husband reared their children in the church. “It’s made a difference in my whole life and the people around me and my children,” she says. “My husband’s mother raised a good person, too. You can’t leave that part out. If you do, then you’ve left out half or maybe three-quarters of the story.”

“I learned all my cooking from my mother,” Jean says. “She was a good cook. We cook the way she did: country cooking—a little of this and a little of that.”

Bob Galloway of Woodville says about his mother, “She taught me manners, honesty, and good work habits. I am what I am today because of my mother and the Godly example she set for me to follow.”

“If ever my kids taught me anything, it has been that all the efforts we put forth to raise them paid off,” he says. “I have learned that all the tuition bills for school were actually worth it because the quality education they received has resulted in them having good jobs.”

Ruth Condo, who attends Senior Days in Bradfordville, learned many skills from her mother, including cooking, baking, ironing, and embroidering, which her mother taught her when Ruth was quarantined with diphtheria as a little girl. “My mom would draw a picture—knife, fork, spoon—on a dish towel, and I would embroider it,” she says.

Her mother taught her patience, kindness, and generosity. “I was a teenager during the Great Depression, and beggars would come to our door. We didn’t have much, but she always gave something to everybody.”

Ruth’s children taught her unconditional love. She also learned that “they’re smarter than I thought!” Most recently, she says, “I learned from my youngest daughter that I ought to come up here to live." She was widowed and living alone in south Florida. "I moved up here sight unseen, and I love my place and have nice neighbors," she says.

Maxine Bussell says she and her husband Charles, who live near Chaires, "were taught to put God first and to do unto others as we want them to do to us." Both the Bussells' parents "taught us that life is not a free ride, but we need to work at making things happen for our own good and for those our lives touch."

Strawberry Spinach Salad with Easy Poppy Seed Dressing

- 1/4 cup low-fat yogurt, preferably Greek style
- Zest and juice of one lemon
- 1 tablespoon granulated sugar or sugar substitute
- 1 tablespoon poppy seeds
- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 1 pound baby spinach
- 1 pint strawberries, quartered
- 2 tablespoons slivered almonds, toasted (optional)

Mix together yogurt, zest, lemon juice, sugar (or sugar substitute), poppy seeds, and oil. Blend until well combined. Place spinach and strawberries in a large bowl and toss with dressing. Sprinkle with almonds and serve immediately. Makes 4 servings.

CORRECTION: Thanks to Rose Glee for pointing out an omission in the ingredient list for the Sunshine Sweet Potatoes recipe in the February/March Gazette. It should have included 1/3 cup honey.

Make Sure Your Charitable Donations Count

Earthquakes. Tsunamis. Hurricanes. Tornadoes. Landslides. Floods. Wildfires. When tragedies strike, many Americans are moved to help by donating money to charities. Sadly, where there's money, there are also unscrupulous people who pretend to collect money for good works and then pocketing what they get. Here are some suggestions to make sure that your donated dollars go where you want them to.

Be on the lookout for these tactics used to separate you from your money:

• Using a phony name that sounds like a legitimate charity. (For example, North American Red Cross is fake; American Red Cross is real.)

• Offering a prize if you make a donation

• Insisting on cash only or on checks made out to a person instead of to an organization

• Applying high-pressure pitches that try to make you feel guilty if you don’t contribute

• Claiming that 100% of donations go to the cause (Every legitimate charity has some overhead costs for administration and for raising money, so it’s impossible to use all donations directly for the organization’s work.)

• Sending an e-mail from an address that looks legitimate, and then asking you to donate via a generic email address (for example, @gmail.com or @yahoo.com)

Do’s and don’ts

+ Do select the charities you trust. You will feel less pressure to respond to requests from organizations you don’t know.

+ Do the research to ensure that your money will be spent wisely (see “Checking Out a Charity” box)

+ Do ask anyone who asks you for a contribution to mail you information about their organization

+ Do doublecheck the organization’s name and address. Sometimes scammers use names of genuine charities but ask you to send donations to a different address.

+ Do be suspicious of fund-raisers who say they’re collecting money to distribute to other groups.

+ Do make all your donations with personal checks, which are safer than credit cards.

+ Do call the police or sheriff’s office if an aggressive or suspicious fund-raiser comes to your door.

+ Do make sure that your donation is legally tax-deductible if that’s important to you. You can check at www.irs.gov/app/pub-78.

- Don’t give cash or your credit card or bank account number to people you don’t know, whether they call you on the phone, come to your door, or send you a letter or e-mail.

- Don’t give money to anyone who offers to send a courier to pick up your donation.

- Don’t click on links in e-mails asking for donations. Even if the name looks like one you’ve given to previously, it may be fake, and you may end up with a computer virus. Instead, type the name of the charity into a search engine.

- Don’t email any sensitive personal information, such as bank account number or credit card number, or Social Security number.

- Don’t give your Social Security number to any fund-raiser. There’s never any need for a charity to collect this information. If they ask for it, that might be a tip-off to fraud.

Ask the Resource Coordinator

Q. My best friend is depressed. It’s no wonder, because her only child and grandkids just moved far away, and both she and her husband have money problems and health problems. Is there a “one-stop shop” where she can get help with all these kinds of problems?

Yes there is. Your friend can call 2-1-1 Big Bend. Just call 211 or 617-6333. The TTY (hearing/speech impaired) number is 921-4020.

All calls are strictly confidential, and callers can remain anonymous. 2-1-1 Big Bend provides a free 24-hour hotline which offers both individual counseling and social service information. It helps callers find the programs that best suit their needs. The people who answer the organization’s phones are trained thoroughly in accordance with nationally recognized professional standards.

Founded in 1970, 2-1-1 Big Bend is an independent, nonprofit organization that receives an average of 175 calls a day. About 20 percent of those calls come from people over 50. The United Way of the Big Bend is a main source of funding; other support comes from the City of Tallahassee, Leon County, Florida Department of Children and Families, Florida Department of Health, and private contributions.

2-1-1 Big Bend publishes the Community Resource Directory. The 2010-2011 edition is 500+ pages, with more than 1,000 listings for social service programs in the region. To purchase a copy, call 617-6301. You can search the directory for free at www.211bigbend.org. Click on Search for Referrals, and you'll find a link to the Community Resource Directory, where you can search the directory by topic, provider, or keyword.

SPECIAL SENIOR

Vineva Payne

Vineva Payne makes it possible for others to attend Miccosukee Senior Days by giving them rides. Doing for others is at the heart of her philosophy of happiness. “I don’t wait for others to do something I can do, especially when I get such a great joy out of it,” Vineva says. “I enjoy spending time with other elder people and helping in any way I can. Now, if you look around, most elder people are lonely and need assistance. Most have to see the doctor, go shopping, and pay their bills—and who would want to miss Senior Day? Who wouldn’t want to spend time with and help such great people?”

Monticello is lucky to be Vineva’s lifelong home. She started working in local cafes in the 1960s—the Lorico Restaurant and the Plaza, among others—and later worked in child care and elder care. One of her three sons—Walter Jr., an electrician—lives there too. Her twins, Alvin and Calvin, both served in the military, one in the Army, one in the Air Force, and both live out of state. Vineva also has grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

“If more people enjoyed helping the elders, I think the world would be a better place—less to get into and so much to learn,” Vineva says, her smile coming right through the telephone line. “God has been good to me and my family, and I take pleasure in giving back.”
